Biography

Kensuke Fujiyoshi was born in Kumamoto, Japan in 1966. He graduated the Arita Technical High School in Saga, a school geared towards the arts, and became a graphic designer in Tokyo. He returned to Saga 3 years later and encountered Hizen-jiki, inherited Japanese porcelain known as Old-Imari. He worked at several porcelain studios as a product designer in Arita, Saga 1988-1996. He declared himself a ceramicist in 1997. He has been creating his unique contemporary porcelain pieces by using traditional skills and craftsmanship ever since. Since 2014, he began showing porcelain sculptures at Sladmore Contemporary in the UK. Since 2022, he began to showing ink drawing pieces. He lives and works in Fukuoka, Japan since 2012.

Artist Statement

Using Japanese traditional craftsmanship to express contemporary artwork is my mission. My coloured porcelain sculptures are a symbolic representation of my work. The emotion finds its source both in the familiar beauty of nature, and in the beauty possessed by traditional objects. I do all product processes myself, even though porcelain products usually need several professional craftsman for each processes. The skills are based on the inherited Japanese culture and techniques of Hizen-jiki, which is known as Old-Imari. As a result of doing all these processes by my own hands, all my works have harmonious beauty. Porcelain works are something fragile, but if handled with love and care, it can last hundreds of years. In any artistic activity, he believes that innovative expression can only come about as a result of respect for the history and the fundamentals. My aim is to create artworks that will still be loved a thousand years from now.
